old abolition faction w s in ite prime in 1836. and, from that period until the ad ption of the compromise measures of 1850, it was continu ally pouring into Congress petition after peti the States, for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, for the exclusion of slavery from the territories and from all new States, and for various other abolition project and devices. No Northern State was more completely imbued with abolitionism than Pennsylvania. Abolition petitions from Penn eylvania were continually presented to Con gress. Sle was evidently anti-slavery to the core. At this very time Mr. Buchanan declared in a debate in the Senate that his opinion. on the subject of slavery were "the same as those of the people of Penneylvania" Speaking of slavery, after stating he would leave slave: where the Constitution left it, with the States he said: "For one, whatever may be my opi ions upon the abstract question of clavery, an I am free to confess they are those of the people of Pennsylvania." [See Congressional Globe

The people of the State of Penneylvania bac given expression to their anti-elavery opinion by the adoption of resol tions in their Stat questing their Representatives in Congress "t State of the Union unless the further Interdic tion of slavery or involuntary servitude, ex cept for the punishment of crimes whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall be prohibited." This is the exact language of the odious Wilmot proviso. Ti ese resolutions als asserted the power of Congress to interfere to prevent the slave-trade between the States. Thus Mr. Bachanan, in his speech from which we quote, endorsed and adopted as his own these opinions of the people of Pennsylvania solemnly avowed through her State Legislature and declared himself in favor of the Wilmo proviso and of the power in Congress to prokibit the slave-trade between the States.

On the 7th January, 1836, upon a motion of Mr. Calhoun "not to receive" memorials for the abolition of slavery 1 the District of Col mbia, Mr. Buchanan sald: "He thought Congress ought not to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, in justice to Maryland and Virginia. But (said he) who slavery ceeses to exist un der the laws of Maryland and Virginia-then, and not till then, ought at to be abolished in th District of Columbia. Notwithstanding these were his opinions, he could not vote for the motion of the Senat r from South Carolina (Mr. Calho n) no' to receive this memorial. He was in favor of receiving the memorial, and exerted himself to procure for it a rejected to the abolition of slavery in the Distric only on the ground of mexpediency. He was not opposed to it in principle, but, so soon as the inexpediency should be removed, he believe that Congress should abolish slavery in the Distruct of Columbia.

In May, 1836, the recognition of the independence of Texas was under consideration. Mr. Buchanan opposed it wi'h much earnestnees, and declared that, ' as an American Senator, he could give the Texans nothing but his prayers and his good wishes." (see Con. Globe, page 36 .) A few days afterwards he ac-knowledged that "he believed the dominion of Mexico over Texas was gone forever," but he still opposed the recognition of the independeuce of Texas. On the 1st of March, 1x37, the following resolution, recognizing Texan Independence, which was introd ced by Mr. Walker of Mississippi, was adopted by a vote of 23 to 19. Mr. Buchanan roled against it: Res red. That the State of Tasse, having established and man tassed as in a deal Covernment of the off perform-ing the duty, freeign and insister, which appetra to the performance of the present of the second of the war. Throughout all the proceedings in reference to Texas, Mr. Buchanan sundily opposed the recognition of her independence, and when, as a thriving Republic, peopled and governed by citizens who had emigrated thirher from the United States, Texas annivation to the control of the We want our readers to mark well this speech. was free territory, and afforded a Southern (souther), as Canada does a Northern one, for fugitive slaves by which they could escape beyond recovery. When Texas declared her independence ce she adopted a constitution studiar to that of the United States, in which slavery was recognized and property in slaves was protected. Texas thus formed a barrier between our Southern slave States and the free territory of Mexico. It was evidently for this reason that Mr. Buchanan so pertunctionally opposed the recognition of Texan independence. He did not want to afford such protection to alavery in the South.

When the treaty of annexation was under consideration, the "question of slavery" was the "only serious obstacle" to his supporting it, for "the felt a strong repugnance by any act of his to extend the limits of the Union over a new slaveholding territory." But when he reflected that the incorporation of Texas into the Union would remove the protection, which, as an independent slave-holding republic, it afforded to alsvery in the United States, and would make the Southern States of the Union coultiquous to the free territory of Mexico and thus afford an opportunity for the slaves of the Southern States of the Southern States of the Southern States to escape beyond recovery, he concluded to support the treaty of annexation.
